Tokio, Jan. 24.—The House of Peers met yesterday morning and was addressed by Premier Salonji, who, speaking of international relations, said that responsibility for the Far East largely rested upon the shoulders of Japan, which had atsined such a high position as the result of constant endeavor toward improvement on the part of its people. Japan's relations with Korea, he said, were increasingly cordial. Regarding China he said, while some questions were pending he expected that through mutual good will these questions would be satisfactorily solved. Marquis Salonji announced that an agreement had been reached between the Canadian government and Japan regarding emigration, and said it must be remembered that the traditional friendship of the American government towards Japan remained unhanged and that negotiations were coninuing in the most cordial manner. He further said that he believed a solution of the emigration question would soon be reached. Referring briefly to national finances, the premier said that the government had fourr it necessary, in order to place the nation's finances on a secure basis, to increase taxation and one s attitude toward automobiling de-bends upon whether one is riding or lodoing. How a Marine Slipped His Cable.

Eusiga Peabody should have been in the navy a hundred years ago, when the men were treated more like brutes than human beings, instead of today. when every sailor, whether officer or seaman, has his rights. But there are natural tyrants who are by nature tyrannical, and Peabody was one of them, though he kept within the regulations, using insult instead of committing a violation of an officer's re-

Tom Spencer was a marine on board a United States cruiser. He was a good soldler, always spick and span and was well educated. The reason for his enlisting in the marine corps was that he hoped some day by good conduct to secure a commission. For some reason or other Peabody conceived a dislike for Spencer. Some said the reason was that Peabody had been appointed to the academy from the gutter and it had failed to make him anything but a gutter snipe, while Spencer had enlisted from the parlor and could only be a gentleman. Be this as it may, whenever Peabody got a chance to put the screws on to Spencer he did it in as irritating and disagreeable fashion as it could be done. There was a fire smoldering in Spencer's breast which nothing but the mutiny laws could keep from breaking out into a volcanic eruption.

There had been a liberty party on shore and some of the leave men had got into a fight with the natives-the cruiser was lying off the coast of Peru-and when they returned Peabody was officer of the deck. Spencer was one of them and gave evidence of his part in the fraces by having his uniform torn to shreds. Peabody seized upon this to storm at him and, his hatred getting the better of his discretion, used a common epprobrious epithet in connection with Spencer's mother. Like a flash the marine's right arm went out, and the ensign went sprawling on the deck.

Here was a case of mutiny. In some of the world's navies even in time of peace to strike an officer means death, The penalty is not so severe in the United States navy, but it means imprisonment. Spencer was put in irons and charges preferred against him.

It was in the hot season, and there is no telling how long a time may elapse before a man may be brought before a court martial. It was probable that Spencer would either be sent home un-The debate turned entirely on the der guard for trial or would be held till the cruiser went north. It was too hot to keep him between decks for an indefinite time, and he was given the liberty of the ship during the day, only being put into the brig at "pipe down."
